MR. DUNNE MAY YET BE RICH

Suing His Partners for Fourth Interest in Profits of Florodora Production.

One of the most popular actors who plays in Richmond is genial John Dunne, the managing director of the Bijou Musical Comedy Company. A more modest, whole-soured actor and manager it would be difficult to find, and, although he has seen fifty-two summers "and several sleigh rides," he is to-day the young st member of his company. And yet he nas seen enough trouble to make even a young man old. However, time changes all things, and it now seems likely that the Supreme Court of New York city will render a decision that will bring to Mr. Dunne one-fourth of the profits of

"Florodora" is the most successful musical comedy of recent years, and perhaps of all time. At any rate, estimates of the profits run from $240,00 to $400,000. and it will be seen that Mr. Dunne's one-fourth interest will not him a goodly sum if the suit is decided in his favor. sum if the suit is decided in his favor. No theatrical suit has ever attracted so much attention, and the final decision of the court will be looked for with much interest.

The story of this contest is a long and The story of this contest is a long and interesting one. Some years ago John W. Dunne and Thomas W. Ryley formed a partnership. The new firm of managers made money with a "man White Flag," but lost on "Hotel Topsy Turvey" and "The Night of the Fourth." Mr. Junne was on the road and Ryley was in New York. One day a telegram came to Dunne from Ryley, stating that they had an option on "The American rights to "Florodora." Dunne telegraphed him to secure the piece. So Ryley went to England. the piece. So Ryley went to England and as he only had enough cash to pur-chase 50 per cent, of the rights, John C. Fisher bought the other of per cent. Of the money paid by Dunne and Ryley for their one-half interest $4.5% was borrowed by Dunne from Joseph L. Effinger, of San Francisco.

of San Francisco.

The musical comedy was first produced in New Haven, Con., November 9th and 10th, 1900, and on the 12th it was brought to the Casino in New York. For some time it seemed to be a failure. Then Dunne, Ryley and Fisher were known as the owners. The contract for the Casino was signed by Mr. Dunne, and he engaged most of the members of the company. Everything looked blue, receipts were paitry, and a "frost" seemed to be in the air. In one night the situation changed, the business took a big jump and a record run was inaugurated. In the meantime Mr. Dunne had again gone out on the road to manage the attraction of the search of the meantime Mr. Dunne had again gone out on the read to manage the attractions of Dunne and Ryley, leaving Ryley to look after the firm's interest in "Florodora." After the piece began to presper, Dunne noticed that there was a peculiar silence on the part of the New York end of the partnership, but for a time he was contentedly serene as to the situation. Later on when all his efforts situation. Later on, when all his efforts to obtain a statement were futile, he went to New York, and there he was coolly informed by his partner that he was not in any way interested in the profit of "Florodora."

profit of "Florodora."

Mr. Dunne at once brought suit for the protection of his share in the property. Judge Gorman directed that Fisher and Ryley give bond in $50,000 to protect Dunne's possible interest pending the trial of the case. More recently a motion was made before Judge Dugro asking for a dissolution of the partnership of Dunne and Ryley and the appoint. of Dunne and Ryley and the appointment of a referee. Howe and Hummel, famous divorce lawyers, argued the case in behalf of Thomas W. Ryley. According to Dunne's attorneys, it was an attempt to forestall the latter's suit against l'isher and Ryley. Judge Dugro denied the motion, so point number two was decided in favor of Mr. Dunne. It is said that an offer of $15,000 was made to Dunne if he would compromise, but he refused to compromise what was a of Dunne and Ryley and the appoint he refused to compromise what was a fight for principle on his part. His law-yers also assert that they will apply to the court for another bond in addition to the court for another bond in addition to the $50,000 bond already furnished by Fisher and Ryley through Frank W. Sarger and the American Sureiy Company. There are two companies on the road playing "Florodora." The original company will shortly leave New York for a tour. The final decision of the court is expected in February, and Mr. Dunne's friends and admirers in Richnend will rejoice if the decision is in his favor.

Application was made by representa-tives of the University Tollege of Medicine to allow them to be heard in regard to the clause whereby the appropriation may be continued to the Medical College of Virginia, Chairman Mcliwaine has fixed Friday afternoon as the time for the argument.

To Hear Mr. Flood. Congressman Hal D. Flood will speak in support of the majority report on the suffrage plan in the Democratic confer-ence to-night.

Mr. Flood is one of the most interest ing debaters in the convention and will attract a large audience to hear him. The legislative report, which was made The legislative report, which was made the special order for Tuesday, then post-poned until Wednesday and again post-poned and made a special order for 16:50 to-day, will be taken up then. Whether it will be delayed until the fight over the University appropriation is settled is a question.

Chairman of the Legislative Committee R Walton Moore could not be found last night, but the advecates of the appropriation who expressed themselves seemed to desire the taking up of that seemed to desire the during all of that report in its order.

As Chairman Moore is leading the fight for the University, he, too, may insist on taking up the special order on schedule time.

STAMPS WERE RETURNED.

Interesting Developments in Fitzgerald Case Postoffice People Hands Off.

The features yesterday of the absorbing case of the disappeaanee Frank H. Fitzgerald were the circumstance that $150 worth of stamps were returned 10 the Southern Railway Company by a to Captain Miller, was in fine spirits, spoke in a cheerful and humorous vein and he was assured by several spoakers of the sympathy and confidence of his comrades in arms. Lieut. Starke spoke feelingly of his love for his company, told his trouble with the postoffice into additional circumstance that the spectors and soil he was innecestary of the source of the company. postoffice inspectors have ceased to handle the case, declaring that the stamps were not stolen from the Government. They now have no further interest in it. The name of the man who returned the stamps to the office of the Southern Railway Company, with the statements in-dicated, is withheld scrupulously. The facts come through officers who are investigating the matter, but the man con-nects the two cases, the first time this has been done except in conjecture. Several interesting reports were traveling about the screets yesterday. One of these rumors had it that Fitzgerald, who is a brother of Mr. Alex, H. Fitz-

One of the young lady nurses, who was heard the negro approaching, but she concluded that it was somethe connected with the institution, and so paid no at-tention to the noise. When she finally looked around, she saw a negro standing in the doorway looking directly at her.
Site said to the intruder: "What do you want here?" To which the scoundrel replied: "I want you."

Thoroughly alarmed, with a piercing scream the young lady sprang to the window, and, partly clad as she was, leaped to the roof just outside. She was ready to spring to the sidewalk many feet below and would have done so if the negro had moved another step. nately, several men on the opposite side of the street saw her predicament and hastened to her assistance, and others in
